AMONG THE FARMERS.

"SPEED THE PLOW,"

September. A swinging of golden-rod,—burning
Of cardinal flower; a yearning
For roses long faded,—a swaying
Of grapes in the vineyard; a straying
Of soft thistiedown o'er the meadow,
A thrush warbling deep in the shadow;
Fhe sigh of the breeze through the sedge
The leaning of ferns o'er the ledges and cliffs, and the plashing incessant
Of gentle-cyed cows; and the pleasant
Blue sky; and we're glad to remember,
That this is September.—Gabrielle M

Mr. Ford on Farming.

HE BIDDEFORD JOURNAL HAS THE

LOWING ON HIS IDEAS.

But the rain laid the dust which was getting troublesome, and Wednesday and Thursday were good fall days without more than a possibility in the sky of showers which did not come.

Henry Ford still owns and cultivates the farm on which he was born in Dearborn, Mich. As he has shown himself to be an exceedingly practical man in his business affairs, what he may have to say on the subject of farming should be worth heeding. In his "My Life and Work," Mr. Ford says that his earliest recollection of life on the Dearborn farm is of "too much work for the results." And that is the way he feels

But the rain laid the dust which was getting the days without more than a possibility in the sky of showers which did not come.

Eight head of registered Herefords were shown from Hillside Farm, South Paris, W. E. Kenney proprietor. The foundation of this head came from the Mountain View Farm herd, and they are fine looking animals.

It could not be truthfully stated that Wednesday's was a record crowd, because there have undoubtedly been more people on the grounds in some previous years, but there were certainly a lot of prople there this year. The crowd on Thursday was large for a third day attended to the proposition of life on the Dearborn farm is of "too much work for the results." And that is the way he feels farmer puts to a really useful purpose hought given to local arrangement. oo many farmers think of putting money into improvements as an expense. Mr. Ford is of the opinion that farm oducts at their lowest prices are dearr than they ought to be; that farm rofits at their highest are lower than hey ought to be. It is the waste motion, e waste effort that makes farm prices On the Dearborn farm, according to Mr. Ford's book, everything is done by Mrs. Mildred Thompson, South Paris, Luther achinery. They have eliminated many ources of waste, but, says Mr. Ford: We have not yet touched on real onomy. We have not yet been able n five or ten years of intense night and day study to discover what really ought to be done. We have left more undone than we have done. Yet months.

Mrs. Mamie Libby, South Paris, Geraldine at no time—no matter what the value of ops—have we failed to turn a first class ofit. We are not farmers we are ndustrialists on the farm.

Mr. Ford believes that the moment a y is and the best way of doing it are the easons why farming is so generally be-leved to be unprofitable. Mr. Ford ncludes that no business could pay if llows luck and example of his forethers. He does not know how to proluce economically, and he does not know how to market his produce. A tay in business very long. That the armer can stay and does stay provides

Mr. Ford's book is valuable because of what the author says, but even at that it touches only the high spots and leaves much to the imagination. It makes no references for example to the everwhelming number of farmers who are trying to do business on inadequate capmonths.

Mrs. Alonzo Hodgdon, South Paris, Glenwood ng after they have failed in every other way they bave tried to make a living. Mr. Ford has succeeded in his business argely because he bad genius for indusial organization; because he had the oresight to appreciate a pressing demand of the people and the energy to attempt to fill it. However, in his argunent he has touched the nerve center of the whole system and his conclusions re mainly reasonable. Now that there little prospect that Mr. Ford will gain control of the Muscle Shoals properties, ne might find an outlet for his surplus nergy and an opportunity to put his neories in practice by buying some ousands of abandoned or neglected arms in New England and staging emonstration of what can be done b pplying to their management the same inciples that he has applied to the siness that bas made him an outstandng figure in the industrial world.

In the list of importations of purebred nimals for which the United States Decates of pure breeding during the last iscal year foxes stood; at the top numbers, dairy cattle were next, with dogs a close third. Beef cattle, horses, and sheep, formerly imported in large numbers, were almost in the same class with cats. Very few horses have bee number of beef cattle and sheep has decreased, partly on account of foot-and-mouth disease, which existed in England a part of the year. However, since the war fewer farm animals of all kinds have been coming into this country.

The total number of all kinds brought in during the year was 2,639. There were 967 foxes, all from Canada; 761 dairy cattle, mostly from the Channel Islands and Canada; 591 dogs; a large part of them from England, Germany and Canada; 151 herses; 87, beel cattle; 62 sheep: and 20 cats.

This may be brought about, as we understand Mr. Ford's argument, by the application to farming of the principles which have made him the world's greatest industrialist. He says that the farmier makes a much too complex affair out of his daily work; that the average farmer puts to a really useful purpose.
